Methodology:

The College Alumni Survey was designed to provide a snapshot of the career paths of alumni who had graduated with a bachelor’s degree from the College of Arts and Sciences 5 years ago. Emails were sent to alumni asking them to fill out an online survey during the summer of 2009. A total of 545 surveys were completed.

Reflections on Skills Developed in the College

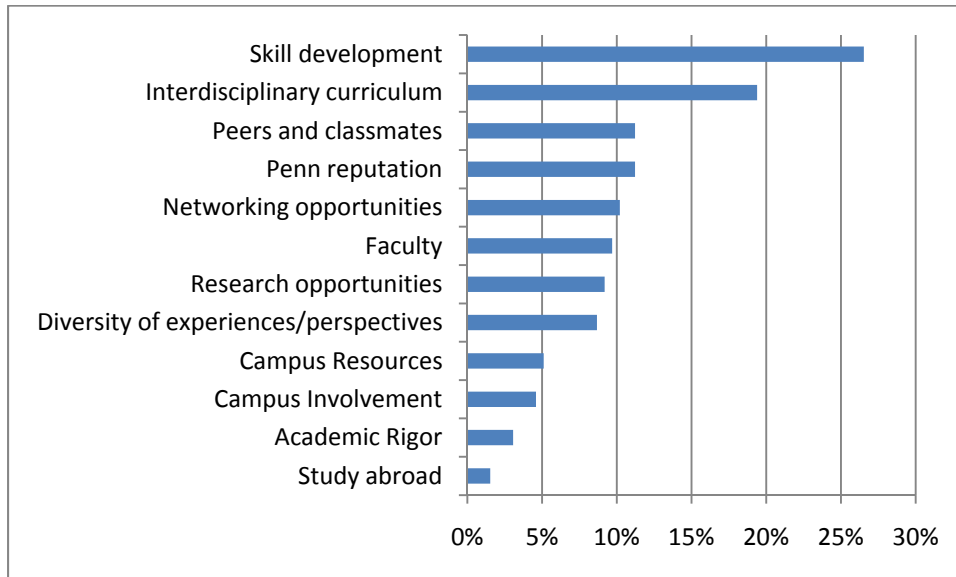

Most Useful Skills

Alumni were asked to rank the three most important skills they developed in the College of Arts & Sciences. Those ranked “most important” were given a numerical rating of 3, second most important 2, and third most important 1. The results were then summed. As the chart to the right indicates, leadership, writing and listening skills were deemed to be the most helpful by alumni in the Class of 2004.

Most Beneficial Aspects of Penn Experience

Many alumni had positive things to say about their experience at Penn. However, here are the most common aspects of their experiences that they found to be the most beneficial to their future lives and careers.

Selected Direct Quotes on Most Beneficial Aspect of Penn Experience

Diversity of Perspectives

- The exposure to a multitude of perspectives and research interests, and the exposure to the urban issues in the City of Philadelphia, specifically within West Philadelphia.

- The diversity of my academic training beyond my major - I was much better prepared for aspects of work beyond just the analytics, as compared to colleagues from other schools.
- Experiencing the diverse set of viewpoints shared by my classmates, learning to appreciate them, and to challenge my own assumptions and ways of approaching the world.

Interdisciplinary Curriculum/Academic Rigor

- Being able to take courses in a variety of areas. Some of my most valuable courses were outside my major. Being exposed to such a diverse and well-rounded education has truly served me well.
- The wide variety of subjects I was able to study and learn about. Having a background in a large number of areas and fields has proven incredibly helpful to me in my multiple jobs.
- Combination of coursework and extracurricular activities helped keep me intellectually stimulated while creating a network and learning skills that I could apply toward my future career
- The quantity of work given and the quality expected at Penn helped prepare me for the future.

Penn Reputation & Networking Opportunities

- The name recognition of Penn and the network I have from it.
- Having connections through the Alumni network
- Connections that open the door in our un-egalitarian society.
- Strong network and reputation.
- Penn's reputation helps you to get hired.

Developing Valuable Skills

- Learning to think critically and being challenged to question things that many may take for granted
- My undergraduate education taught me to think critically, and I felt well-read once I graduated.
- Writing skills & ability to interact with people different from myself
- Becoming a true scholar and recognizing the importance of taking multiple perspectives into account. Learning that what you are taught is not always 'fact' and should be questioned. In essence, I was taught to think.
- Being taught how to think clearly and write well.
- Development of thought and critical analysis important to adulthood in general.

Community of Talented Faculty and Peers

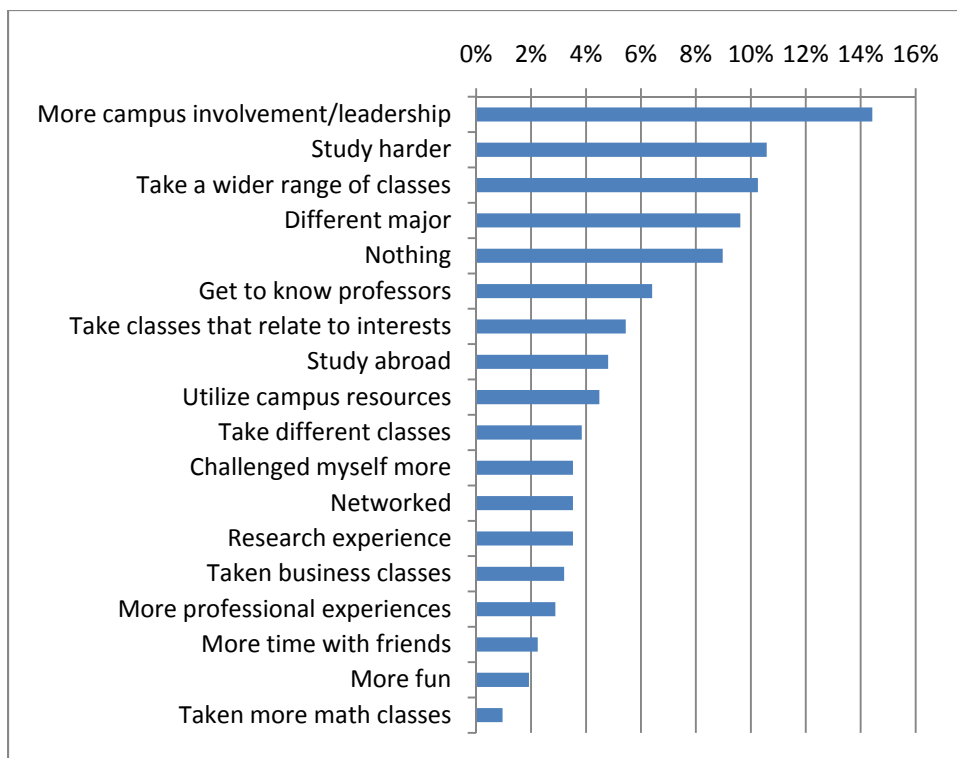

- Being in a community of thoughtful, knowledge-seeking individuals and having access to the resources to push my own intellectual curiosity.
- Taking courses with eminent and famous professors and the quality and reputation of a degree from Penn
- The professors were amazing and really inspired me. I loved my classes and felt like I became a better writer and researcher while there.
- The most beneficial aspect of my education at Penn was being surrounded by bright, motivated and diverse individuals - from professors to students to visiting guest speakers - who are constantly questioning conventional thinking...
- Having amazing professors who were active in their fields. This produced many opportunities for research, travel, and independent studies.
- I think the most beneficial aspect of my education at Penn was the exposure to a diverse, intellectually stimulating student body as well as faculty. I believe this environment fostered a lot of personal growth and self-discovery.

Campus Resources

- Any resource that you could imagine is available to you.
- The network of people and career services at Penn
- The extra-education resources only a school like Penn could provide
- The network of people and Career Services at Penn
- Beneficial for my career: OCR and Penn brand name

Things Alumni Wish They Had Done Differently

In the hopes that current students can benefit from their mistakes, here are things that alumni said they wish they had done differently while they were undergraduates at Penn.

Selected Direct Quotes:

Building Relationships with Peers and Faculty and Networking

- Collaborate more with classmates to take advantage of different perspectives and enhance networking skills.
- I would have learned how to network. While I wasn't ready at the time, I feel I should have been more involved in learning about careers.
- I would like to get to know more of my professors. It took me a few years before I sought out professors in their office hours. I would like the opportunity to learn from more professors outside the classroom.

Greater Campus Involvement

- I would get involved in more activities (clubs, organizations, etc.) and take advantage of more of the resources provided (i.e. Career Services, Kelly writer's house, etc.).
- Be more involved in student organizations and be more engaged in leadership and outreach activities. Also, to be more focused academically in a particular area to gain expertise.
- Done more - more activities, gone to more events, taken advantage of more - Penn has so much to offer, I didn't even experience half of it!

Less Stress and More Fun

- Spent less time worrying about employment and enjoyed myself.
- Worked less hard. It doesn't matter as much.
- I would have taken more time to enjoy myself.

Study Abroad

- I was so happy at Penn and engaged in life there that I didn't want to be away for an entire semester abroad, but I wish I had done that.
- I wish I had traveled abroad
- I would have spent an entire year rather than one semester abroad.
- I would have studied abroad for a summer or semester

Challenging Yourself and Exploring Careers and Fields of Study

- I would have taken more risks and taken a greater variety of courses. And one very basic thing - going to class is important! It seems very basic, but I was definitely someone who learned it the hard way.
- I would have taken even more classes outside of my direct field of study. My three favorite classes at Penn were Intro to video editing, International Relations intro, and Negotiations.
- Explore more courses outside my fields and take more advantage of academic events and resources outside of class.
- I probably wouldn't have started out as an econ major for my first two years- I just did that because I thought it was the right thing to do for me to get a "good job". But it helped me figure out what I liked (psychology... which I figured out because I loved game theory in econ). So I don't regret it :)
- I would have taken more classes outside of my major because my world revolves around science now, and I no longer have as much time and energy to pursue other interests.

Take Advantage of Campus Resources

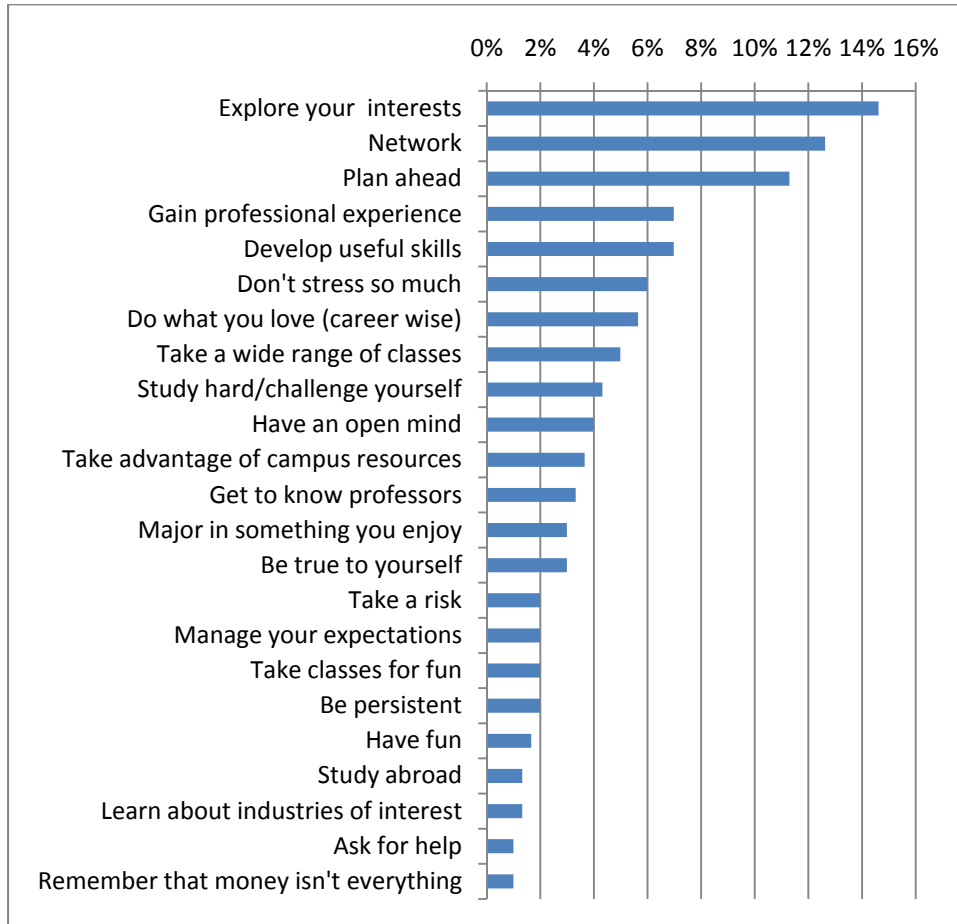

- Taken more advantage of Career Services and planned better for a future career. I wish I had taken a Personality test to find out what might've been a good match early on.
- I would have taken advantage of the tools that are provided through Career Services and selected an alternative course load.
- I would have sought out more learning resources and communities.
- Take better advantage of the resources the university has to offer.
- I probably would have...taken more advantage of the opportunities that Penn provides.
- I would have liked to network more, making better use of the many resources that the University offers.

Gained More Professional Experience

- I would have tried to try out different internships during my time
- Taken advantage of courses at Wharton. Spent more time investigating summer internship opportunities.
- Taken more advantage of internships during summers to test what I wanted to do

Advice from Alumni for Undergraduates

Alumni had a range of suggestions for current students but there were some consistent themes, which are designated by the graph below which indicates the percentage of respondents who made these particular suggestions.

Selected Direct Quotes from Alumni - Advice:

Manage your expectations

- Be prepared for a few months of unemployment and find creative ways to keep yourself occupied and happy during those times, including attending meetings or functions related to your career choice.
- Be prepared to start at the bottom of the ladder in an industry. I think too many Penn students expect too much from their first jobs. Penn opens doors but it doesn't necessarily allow you to jump over entry-level positions.
- Don't be afraid that your major or first job will define you forever. Despite being an Economics major and working in consulting for a while, I ultimately decided that I wanted to be a physician –I'm a medical student at Penn now, and I couldn't be happier.
- It doesn't matter what you study in school; the key is to spend time on what interests you. Employers hire from a diversity of backgrounds, and we generally are most interested in finding people who can demonstrate interest and succeed.

Keep an open mind

- Keep an open mind and don't box yourself into a specific field/major/concentration too early.
- Think outside the box. Don't get roped into traditional career paths (i.e. law school/finance) because you think you have to do something "prestigious". Talk to everyone you can and find out about under-the-radar careers that might suit you perfectly.
- Don't try to pinpoint exactly what you want—your career path develops on its own. Be flexible but also don't think the grass is greener elsewhere. Be happy where you are.
- Some of the best opportunities seem to come from nowhere, so be open to anything.
- Don't judge an entire industry by one company.

Be true to yourself and follow your interests

- Do what feels right, even if you're not sure where you're going. You can figure that out later.
- Be honest with yourself to find the best career fit.
- Follow your passion. Even if you don't know what you want to do and take on a job that you feel like you're "supposed to" have (e.g. business consulting), you will eventually find your calling and have a very successful career.
- Do what interests you now and don't worry so much about checking boxes on an application. It's easy enough to spin your experiences into marketable skills and strengths later.
- Don't stay on a path that's wrong for you. It's ok to change your mind. There are pressures to declare a major and get on a career path; but don't be afraid to change your mind if you don't like the path you've chosen.
- Major in what you enjoy so you won't have regrets, but also double major in something practical.

Get involved on campus

- Try to get involved on campus and also to find good/interesting internships (even if they are unpaid) during the summers.
- Get involved with extracurricular activities - your GPA doesn't count for as much as you think it does on your resume. Life experience and teamwork are more important!
- Join student groups—not too many, but have a long term relationship with the ones you really like.

Ask for help and talk to people about your interests/network

- Be active in the process. Reach out to as many people as you can that may be able to help guide your career.
- Speak as much as you can to people who do what you think you may like to do. Whether it's grabbing a drink, or a coffee or a lunch, finding not even a mentor, but just someone who is knowledgeable is an invaluable resource.
- Be persistent and network in person!
- Find an advisor that you get along with and that is knowledgeable in the field you wish to pursue.
- Make every effort to talk to people in the field that you think you want to go into and ask them about what they do in a typical day, their quality of life, etc.
- Focus on the major, not the pre-med, pre-law, pre-whatever requirements. Get the most out of the professors and the learning experience, not checking off boxes.
- Take advantage of your relationships with professors, mentors and employers while you're still in school; have letters of recommendations submitted to your credentials file!
- Do your research. Get connected with people who are working in the field that you are interested in and find out as much as you can from their experience. Having connections can really help you get your foot in the door.

Gain professional experiences

- Get as many internships as possible to really see what it would be like in whatever field you are considering. Don't feel like your first job out of college needs to dictate the rest of your life. Don't be afraid of networking."
- Do as many internships throughout college that you can to give you a better idea of what you want.
- Seek out mentors and use summers wisely to find internships or other jobs that expose you to your areas of interest. Treat each job as a real job, don't burn bridges and make a good impression. First impressions are long-lasting and difficult to change.

- Talk to a lot of people about the area you are looking to pursue and try it out during a summer. If you don't like it for 10 weeks, you will probably not enjoy working there for several years after graduation. Be open about trying different opportunities.
- Through internships, I realized what I did and did not want to do as a career. It is important to explore facets of real life applications of your major as early as possible.

Develop useful skills

- If you learn to think (and write) as an undergraduate, you can parlay a degree in almost anything into a career in almost any field.
- Focus on learning skills that will serve you well in various careers and don't get too caught up trying to pave the way for a career path you may end up changing anyway.
- Learn to write, read analytically, and hold conversations with people from all backgrounds.
- If you're not pursuing an area that requires in-depth specialized knowledge from college (e.g. hard sciences), work more on developing interpersonal and learning/analytical/communication skills that will serve you in any profession.
- You will learn much of what you need on the job. I have worked in finance for years without ever taking a finance class. Plus, the theory and practice of a lot of professions changes, so what you learn in school may not apply forever.
- Take classes that both maximize rigor and teach something with serious intellectual purpose. At all costs learn how to write and write well.
- In most jobs, being able to communicate effectively is paramount. Make sure to take writing-intensive classes, even if you've already completed the requirements.
- It is important to be well rounded. Make sure you have a diverse skills set to offer employers. Become proficient in a foreign language!

Take a wide range of classes and explore your interests

- Get a varied and well-balanced education. Investigate areas you are interested in, as well as those you think will help you later in life. Learn and have fun simultaneously. Find what you love and then strive to achieve a career that compliments it.
- Take classes in fields unrelated to your future career plans.
- Take all types of classes. Research different jobs, and see what skill sets are important, and take classes to hone those skills.
- Take classes that will challenge you and push you.
- Take some time to explore different fields before committing to a specific profession or course of graduate study.
- Take time to figure out what you want to do. If there's an area of curiosity, one should explore it.
- Do not make a decision to do anything which costs a substantial amount of time and money (i.e. go to graduate school and/or receive another degree) simply because you don't know what else to do. If you need to, take a year off and explore your options.
- Study what you enjoy. You can focus upon your career after college and in professional/graduate education.

Money isn't everything

- Think about what you love and what you are good at and remember that money isn't everything.
- Be open to any opportunities regardless of salary.
- Think long and hard about what it is that interests you, and how you want to spend your days. It's not worth going to graduate school or taking a job simply because it "pays well." You need to think about what will fulfill you as a person.

Study Abroad

- Consider going abroad while you're young, footloose and fancy free.
- Go abroad! I studied abroad in Buenos Aires, one of the best experiences
- Study abroad programs are not the only way to live abroad and learn about foreign cultures. It's possible to enroll independently in foreign universities and find employment, although it requires a bit of research.

Don't stress/Have fun

- Don't worry about what your first job out of college is. Everyone I know has tried several by now, if not dozens (literally!). As long as you are learning something and can pick up some good references along the way, you're doing just fine.
- Try to balance hard work with fun activities as much as possible. It is doable, just easier for some than for others.
- Party hard; have fun; enjoy every day and what it has to offer. When it's time to study, sit down and focus and get the job done.
- Don't plan your career as an undergraduate! That is silly. You should assume that what you think you want to at 18 is not what you should or will be doing in your late 20s.
- Do not agonize over choosing the correct major or initial career. There are many ways to find a satisfying type of work, and the journey may last a lifetime. It is okay to start in one type of work and to allow this choice to lead you in another direction.

Plan ahead

- Do your best to determine your future goals and then tailor your schedule around them to ensure that they cover all you would like before graduating.
- The more you can narrow your career choice earlier in college, you will see success faster and greater than if you spend too much time weighing out the options.
- Have a good idea of where you'd like to end up, or what an ideal position would be and plan well for that, but also be open to accept opportunities that present themselves unexpectedly.
- Plan your career, even if you are not sure what it will be. Plan to adjust your plan.

Take a risk

- Don't fall behind the pack because you are too scared or too proud to stick your neck out. Take a chance or try something unconventional when thinking about the future.
- Whatever you choose, give it 110%. Don't be afraid to choose the path less traveled. Also, figure out your assets and use them to your advantage.
- Don't be afraid to take some time off after graduation to think about what you really want to do for a career.
