Methodology:

The College Alumni Survey was designed to provide a snapshot of the career paths of alumni who had graduated with a bachelor’s degree from the College of Arts and Sciences 10 years ago. Emails were sent to alumni asking them to fill out an online survey during the summer of 2009. A total of 348 surveys were completed.

Median Salary Comparison

Interestingly, despite common disparities between men's and women's wages in the work force, the median current salary for women in the class of 2009 is slightly higher than that for men. Correspondingly, the percentage of increase between first and current salaries for women (186%) is significantly higher than that of men (113%).

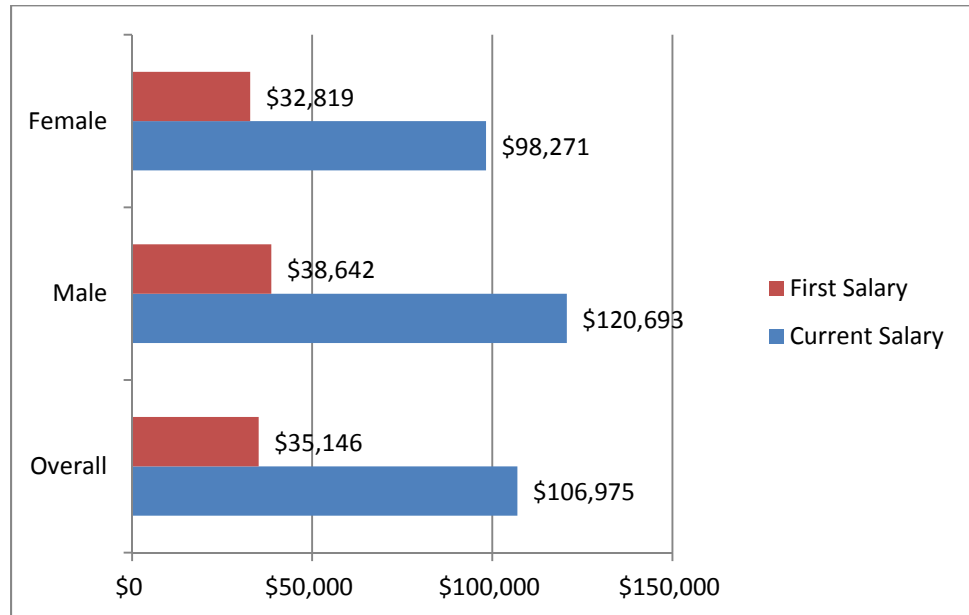

Average Salary Comparison

Overall, the average salary for Penn grads more than tripled over the ten years since first graduating from Penn.

Gender discrepancies common in the work force are also at play for Penn graduates.

However, both men and women experienced almost identical percentages of average salary increase: 113% for men, 112% for women.

Reflections on Skills Developed in the College

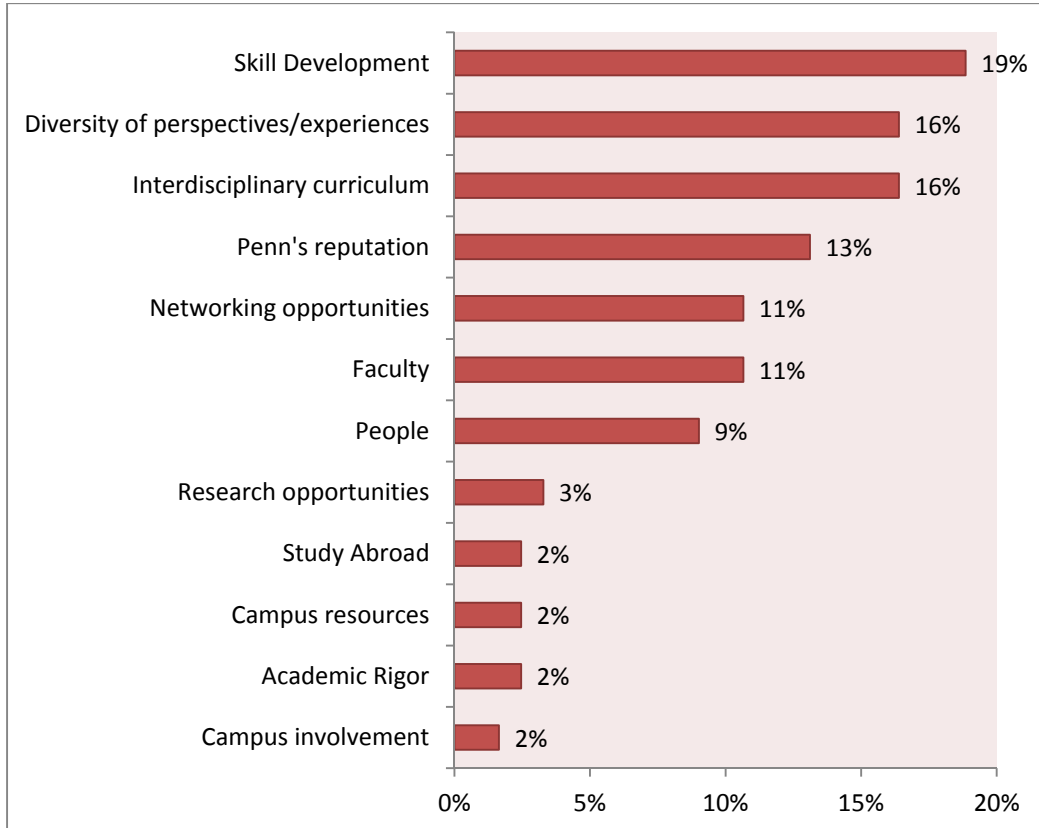

Most Useful Skills

Alumni were asked to rank the three most important skills they developed in the College of Arts & Sciences. Those ranked “most important” were given a numerical rating of 3, second most important 2, and third most important 1. The results were then summed. As the chart to the right indicates, critical thinking, analytical and writing skills were deemed to

Most Beneficial Aspects of Penn Experience

Many alumni had positive things to say about their experience at Penn. However, here are the most common aspects of their experiences that they found to be the most beneficial to their future lives and careers.

Selected Direct Quotes

Developing Valuable Skills

- Learning how to interact with faculty/staff/students who expected that I be able to think critically
- Learning how to think, problem solve, apply concepts
- How to be self-sufficient and function in "the real world" on my own away from mom and dad.

Diversity of Perspectives

- [Being immersed in] the "big" environment, having grown up in a small town learning what it takes to make it
- The introduction to diversity (thoughts, people, environment)
- Being exposed to a wide range of people from different backgrounds.
- interacting with people in the framework of a vibrant multi-cultural university

Interdisciplinary Curriculum

- The breadth of my educational experience. Specifically the access to world-class researchers from a broad range of academic fields.
- Developing a cross-disciplinary education and the ability to research and write.
- Broad liberal curriculum with freedom to take classes in any school or area. I took classes at the med school, Wharton, nursing grad school, grad school of education, and loved that aspect.
- The liberal arts education - taking courses in a variety of subjects to become knowledgeable about a wide scope of things.

Penn Reputation & Networking Opportunities

- Network and Reputation of School
- The network of people you meet
- Providing me with the connections to science industry via PENN's reputation
- Having the Penn name on my resume
- Quality of education, perceived value of having an Ivy League degree
- Being a Penn grad definitely opens doors in the job market and applying to grad schools!

Community of Talented Faculty and Peers

- Access to outstanding professors and sophisticated students. All-around intellectual environment was phenomenal. I still use what I learned in college.
- access to reputable researchers in the field
- Being exposed to extremely thoughtful faculty who pushed you to push your limits every day.
- Exposed to smart, driven people who have become lifelong friends

Campus Resources & Research Opportunities

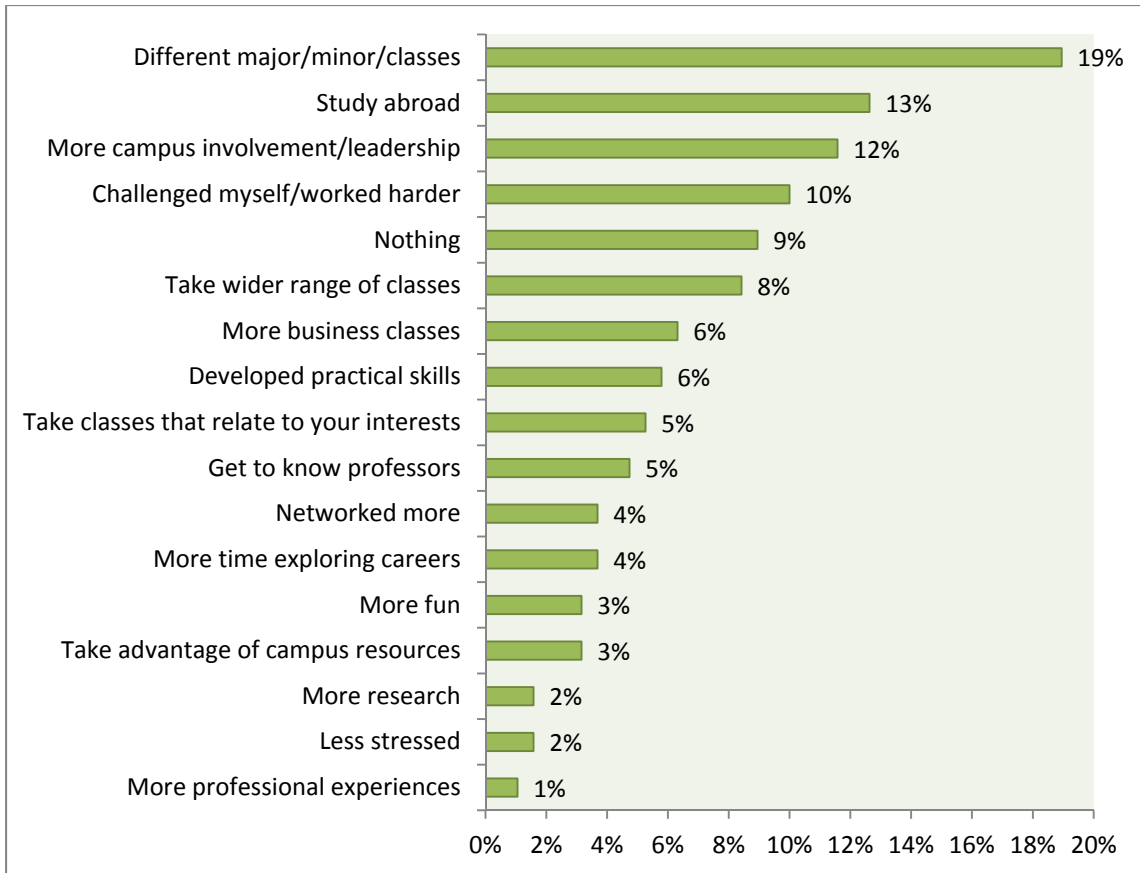

- I found my first job through Career Services.
- the quality of the education, the other students and the resources available were all very beneficial
- Prospect to work individually with professors on research projects and other personal interaction opportunities
- Ability to work in research settings with professors.

Campus Involvement

- I actually learned a lot in my classes, but other beneficial things were the leadership opportunities I had in SPEC Connaissance, Penn Debate Council. Penn really gives you a lot of opportunities to start clubs and meet people whom you wouldn't otherwise
- Participating on the varsity rowing team.

Things Alumni Wish They Done Differently

In the hopes that current students can benefit from their mistakes, here are things that alumni said they wish they had done differently while they were undergraduates at Penn.

Selected Direct Quotes:

Building Relationships with Peers and Faculty and Networking

- Networked more with my peers. Taken advantage of more cultural events on campus.
- Develop a wider, more diverse network of friends.
- spend more time at professors' office hours
- I would network with more people and get to know my professors better.
- Work more closely with professors. I also wish I had gone abroad.

Greater Campus Involvement

- Become involved in more student organizations and sought leadership positions.
- be involved in more clubs, etc to get exposure to other career skills
- I would have gotten more involved in clubs and tried to develop stronger relationships with my teachers.
- I would take on more leadership activities and get involved in more Penn activities formally

Study Abroad

- Do a full academic year abroad
- I wish I had studied abroad
- I would have taken time to go abroad and would have enjoyed the arts more.
- I would've tried to master a second language and studied abroad.

Less Stress and More Fun

- If I had more time I would have loved to take some more classes for fun ie another language
- Relax about grades and have more fun!
- Not stress so much about school, and have more of a balanced social life
- I would have worked harder to not let the pre-professional atmosphere affect me.

Challenging Yourself and Exploring Careers and Fields of Study

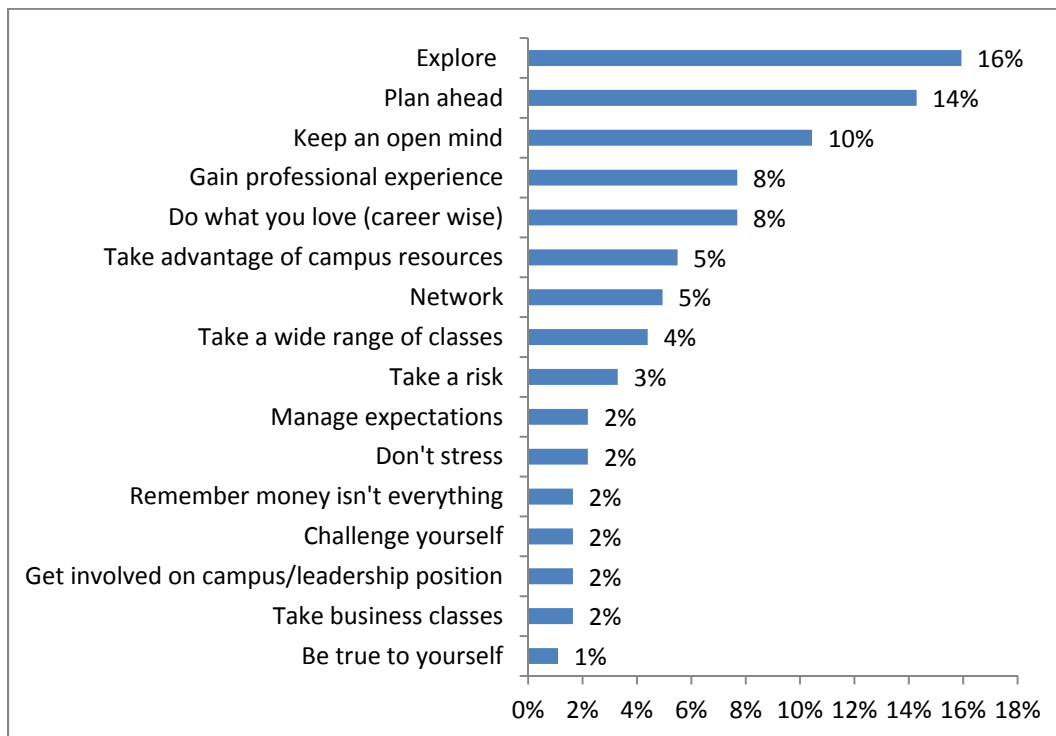

- I wish I had taken a broader variety of classes and had taken the time to consider what I was going to do upon graduation.
- Taken more of the classes I was interested in and less of the ones I thought I "should" take.
- I would have taken more classes outside my field.
- Focus on studying more and caring more about the classes I was taking.

Take Advantage of Campus Resources

- I would have gotten more involved and been less intimidated. I was a first generation college student and came from a small high school that didn't have many services and I didn't know how to explore and access support services.
- Asked for help earlier and more often.
- Honestly, I would take advantage of the services offered when it comes to picking a major, career planning, etc. When I graduated, I was a little lost.

Advice from Alumni for Undergraduates

Alumni had a range of suggestions for current students but there were some consistent themes, which are designated by the graph below which indicates the percentage of respondents who made these particular suggestions.

Selected Direct Quotes from Alumni:

Manage your expectations

- In this economy, do not be afraid of accepting a job that is below your expectations. Work hard and prove yourself and you will be rewarded.
- Be prepared to start at the bottom. Work for free if you have to in order to get your foot in the door. Work hard now so you can work less later.
- Don't be afraid to think outside the box and it might take a few tries before you find a job that is challenging and fulfilling

Keep an open mind

- Always keep an open mind and be able to adapt to unexpected issues, i.e. unable to get into grad school or not getting first choice interviews.
- Try to talk to people in varied industries. Don't succumb to the group mentality of pursuing certain type of "in" jobs. Be open to trying new things.
- Be flexible. Plans rarely work out unless you know exactly what you want to be doing for the rest of your life. Just prepare yourself to be surprised both by yourself and by those around you.
- Be open to other options than the one idea of what you think you want to do. Don't be afraid to get creative.
- Keep an open mind when you are job searching. You may end up in a field you never expected to be in to begin with and find that you love it. Don't rule things out without really doing research on them.
- Be open minded, willing to travel, humble, loyal while weighing your future growth, and think about what you want to do is going to remain viable and important to an evolving society and economy.
- Be open to different career paths; don't get too zoned in on a single track.
- Try a bunch of things while you are in college; take some unexpected classes. You will end up being successful, but you will regret it if you don't take some time to see what else is out there.

Be true to yourself and follow your interests

- Don't follow the masses. Decide what it is that you have a passion/aptitude for and concentrate on developing a marketable skill set in those areas.
- Be honest with yourself and follow your interests, not your classmates'.
- Pick a job that you can feel passionate about. Jobs right out of college are still part of the educational process.
- Choose a career that you want to do on a daily basis.
- Make sure you do what you love instead of what you think is most important.
- Chase what you really want to do because the road is too long and difficult if you are not committed.
- Study what you love and what challenges you intellectually. Use grad school to hone your "trade"
- Figure out what you want to do and try to slowly navigate in that direction. The relationships, friends, and social experiences are a great part of college, but the career part is also important.

Get involved on campus & take risks

- Become involved in student organizations, network and seek leadership positions
- Take risks - you don't have to be a doctor or lawyer or work in an investment bank
- Do things you won't have a chance to do again; make lots of friends - they never go away; push yourself to not take the less intense classes just because they are -- take classes that either are directly related to career or are a genuine interesting to you
- Take risks. DO what you enjoy and realize that you are probably not going to work for the same company for 5+ years like people used to do.

Ask for help and talk to people about your interests/network

- Speak early in college career with counselors so you can plan your major and extracurricular activities (research, volunteer work)
- Don't be afraid to ask! College goes by so quickly and it's really your time to test the waters and discover academic disciplines, other people, and just worlds of new information and experiences.

- Utilize the career center. Utilize your professors. Network with your classmates: this is an excellent way to brainstorm.
- Actively seek out faculty mentors. Have coffee, discussions, and engage in external-to-coursework interactions (research- independent or otherwise).
- Get letters of recommendation after every semester, just so that faculty don't have time to forget; maintain contacts with friends and faculty—one never knows when one of them will know of a lead.
- Do not expect anyone to help except the network you build for yourself. Take as many opportunities as you can to build that network, and it will pay off throughout your career. Fellow classmates have been hugely helpful in my career.
- Network more—if only to get an idea what doors are open to you. Don't be shy.

Gain professional experiences

- Try to intern at a variety of places prior to graduating so that you have an idea of work environments.
- Build your resume through internships. If you plan to work in publishing, build a strong writing portfolio that reflects the type of writing you hope to do professionally.
- Internships in the field you are interested in are incredibly important and in some ways more than your major. Not only do you gain experience in an area that you hope to work in but you also learn if you in fact want to work in that industry.
- Internships are key! Get as many under your belt as you can to enable you to refer to real experiences and show that you are a serious, dedicated person when interviewing for your first job.
- Take advantage of opportunities to get tangible experience in professional experience so that you know what the "real" work world is like and if that industry or profession suits you.
- Find an internship or job each summer to try out what the "real world" looks like in various industries and jobs.

Develop useful skills

- Focus on skills that are transferrable across industries (research, analytical, problem solving, leadership, collaboration)
- Learn to write well. Learn to adapt. Be ready to continue your education on the job.
- Don't underestimate the importance of learning to write well. It is a critical skill to learn no matter what field you go into.

Study abroad

- Study abroad—it's the only time in your life when you will have an opportunity to spend 3 months in another country. Do it, and really learn about the other country.
- Study abroad and try doing an internship abroad. And learn a foreign language, I mean really learn it!

Take a wide range of classes and explore your interests

- Challenge yourself. Take a broad array of classes because you'll never know what you might do.
- Get broad exposure. Focus on being personable and knowing how to communicate effectively. You can learn most specific skills on the job.
- Take advantage of the professors and take courses that you find interesting with little to do with your career aspirations. You may find a different path than you thought you would take.
- Take advantage of the wide variety of academic offerings in the curriculum
- While setting yourself up for your career is of utmost importance, make time to study things outside of your chosen field as well.
- Take a broad variety of classes in your first two years to determine your area of interest. Then focus on what you like, major in it, and get your foot in the door with a good internship.
- The major you pick doesn't matter as long as you're "learning how to learn" - b/c almost no major actually prepares you for whatever job you end up doing. But the general skills you learn in the classroom are what are applicable to every type of job.

Money isn't everything

- You can make money in a non-financial industry. As long as you follow what you are interested in doing, the money will come. Someone once told me, "In your twenties, explore what there is to do. In your thirties, find what you want to do." I think that's good advice.
- Salary should not be the first priority in selecting a job.
- Don't focus on salary for your first couple of jobs

Don't stress/Have fun

- Enjoy college because the working world is tough. Take classes that interest you even if they're not in the field you intend on working in. This is the one time in your life you can learn just for learning's sake.
- Don't stress about career choices early on; it will come together later. Just study what you are passionate about.
- Your major often has nothing to do with your future career. Don't stress over it.
- Relax. You don't have to figure it out now. Do something that excites you.
- Take some time off after college! Seriously, I always will regret that I didn't move to Colorado and become a ski instructor for a year. Don't worry so much about on campus recruiting—the right job takes time, effort, and hundreds of conversations.
- Not to be concerned with choosing a lifetime career when selecting first job.

Plan ahead

- Plan for a career, but don't specialize too early. Employers value intellectual curiosity and the critical and creative thinking that can be learned in a range of non-pre-professional courses.
- Think about where you want to be in 5, 10 and 15 years. We often make decisions based on what we think will make us happy at age 24, but we should be considering other life goals and desires and try to imagine where we will want to be/want to do.
- be involved in what you're interested in now -- don't wait until after you graduate
- Think about both short-term AND longer-term objectives. Take advantage of assessments (MBTI, SII, CPI) as a more self-aware candidate is a stronger candidate
- Think critically about what you would like to do after graduation and try a bunch of things until you find something you enjoy doing.
- Consider how your academic choices/performance will impact your chosen field (including fields you only remotely have interest in), and start preparing freshman year.
- Think three steps ahead, because employers are. If you want to work in a specific field, get an internship while in school. And NEVER burn bridges. Always keep in contact with your references.
